2011 AJN Book of the Year Winner in Leadership and Management! The ultimate goal for Doctor of Nursing Practice (DNP) leaders is to develop skills that will support their ability to lead effectively through complex challenges-such as working within the constraints of tight budgets, initiating health care policy change to eliminate health disparities, and improving health care outcomes at all levels of care. This text is an invaluable instructional guide for nursing graduate students who are developing the skills needed to fulfill this new and emerging role of clinical leadership. With this book, nurses can develop leadership skills that will ultimately transform health care practice by incorporating innovative professional models of care. It provides critical information and practical tools to enhance leadership, drawing from the works of experts in business and health care leadership. This book is an important resource for DNP students, nurse practitioners, and current clinical leaders dealing with the challenges of health care for the next generation. Key topics: Cultivating the characteristics of a transformational leader: charisma, innovation, inspiration, intellect, and more Developing the role of the DNP within complex organizational systems Incorporating new care delivery, practice, and management models through leadership Navigating power, politics, and policy: building the team, understanding economics and finance, and more

It is difficult for recent generations to imagine the fear which 'infantile paralysis' or poliomyelitis engendered half a century ago. Epidemics developed throughout the world, generally during the summer months, and struck people without warning. —Dr. Richard Cruess, former McGill Dean of Medicine Canada's first major polio epidemic occurred in 1927. Not until the emergence of HIV-AIDS years later would an illness grip the population and preoccupy government and the medical community to such an extent. Between 1927 and 1953 (Canada's largest epidemic) poliomyelitis tended to increase not only in incidences, but also in severity. The development of the Salk and Sabin vaccines was the beginning of the end for a disease the United Nations hopes will be eradicated by next year. Walking Fingers tells the story of polio—its history and Canada's pivotal role in the production and mass distribution of vaccine to thousands of children, and the story of determined people and organizations (like the March of Dimes) who raised funds for immunization clinics across Canada in the late 1950s. At the core of the book are 36 poignant stories of polio survivors and their care-givers from all walks of life, including Paul Martin, Jr. Arranged in chronological order (from the date of their infection, ranging from 1923 to 1984), their accounts reveal the evolution of medical treatment in Canada over the last 80 years. Sally Aitken is a community activist who had polio in early childhood. She served two terms as a Westmount city councillor and is the co-author of Histoire vécue de la Polio au Québec. Helen D'Orazio enjoyed a 27-year-long career in nursing until she developed symptoms of post-polio syndrome. She now volunteers for the Polio Quebec Association. Stewart Valin is a biophysicist. His father, James, had polio.
