Eleanor Estes's The Hundred Dresses won a Newbery Honor in 1945 and has never been out of print since. At the heart of the story is Wanda Petronski, a Polish girl in a Connecticut school who is ridiculed by her classmates for wearing the same faded blue dress every day. Wanda claims she has one hundred dresses at home, but everyone knows she doesn't and bullies her mercilessly. The class feels terrible when Wanda is pulled out of the school, but by that time it's too late for apologies. Maddie, one of Wanda's classmates, ultimately decides that she is "never going to stand by and say nothing again."

Every teacher knows that a good lesson needs planning and preparation. It applies to everything we teach, and ESOL is certainly no exception. I have been asked occasionally to teach classes at very short notice which means no preparation and I have managed to do it. However, it has always left me with a sense of frustration which is why I rarely agree to do it these days because I like to be prepared in order to make my lessons count. Having recently returned to teaching, I have discovered that I had two major issues: 1. I couldn't find a lesson plan template I liked. 2. My lesson plans kept getting lost among the paperwork. So I decided to create a book which I was going to use for my lesson planning. I worked out a plan template which I liked. I didn't want to make it too long. Like everyone else, I have a life and detailed plans are time-consuming. So it needed to be short. I aimed to fit it into 1 page, with the second page expanding on the activities, takeaways and other aspects should there be a need for a more detailed description. Once the book gets published, I will be ordering a couple of copies of the ESOL Lesson Planner for myself. I hope that you find the templates as useful as I have found it so far. It's just that from now on, I will have all of my plans in one place which can't be a bad thing!

Learning to Plan Modern Languages Lessons contains a wealth of guidance and ideas for those learning to teach in secondary schools. Drawing on extensive experience and research in the field, it offers detailed explanation of basic lesson planning methods and the principles that underpin them, illustrated by worked examples of well-planned lessons. Specific aspects of language learning such as grammar and culture are explored, together with ideas for how to make your planning skills more effective in long-term collaborative and reflective practice. Starting from a presentation, practice, production (PPP) model of language teaching, the book aims to: provide structured, practical starting points in lesson planning for beginning teachers of modern languages (ML); deepen knowledge and understanding of ML as a subject and how it is learnt (pedagogical subject knowledge), in order to inform and support planning decisions; develop understanding of lesson planning as part of a planning cycle; enhance understanding of strategies and professional development opportunities to promote the further development of planning Lesson plans are designed to increase the opportunities for (1) comprehension of the L2 input and (2) vocabulary learning. The lesson plans include consecutive objectives, interconnected materials, and activities which are aimed at leading novice students of Russian to the effective transition from the early comprehension stage to the early speech production stage. The designed lessons reflect the ACTFL guidelines for Novice Low and Novice Mid sublevels. Each lesson plan contains two demonstrations followed by a series of whole-group and individual comprehension activities. PowerPoint presentations and video clips are included in the demonstrations to provide learners of Russian with more opportunities to comprehend the L2 input. The first four lesson plans include the use of Total Physical Response technique compatible with the guidelines of the Natural Approach. The Total Physical Response is employed as an unthreatening and meaningful way to ask learners of Russian to listen to the target language and respond nonverbally. The last lesson focuses on providing the learners with guided opportunities to begin producing yes-no answers and other simple words based on their comprehension of the target language.
