Shadows Over Bøgenhafen - Wikipedia

Shadows under Bogenhafen. In the original Shadows over Bogenhafen, some extra attention was given to the exact ways and means by which adventurers might attempt to leap the stream of effluent that winds its way through the sewers beneath the town. This was removed from Enemy in Shadows for reasons of space, and because a similar, if less nuanced, effect can be had by calling for an Athletics Test should Characters wish to attempt anything other than a slow shuffle in pursuit of their quarry.

This adventure leads on to the next instalment of the Enemy Within Campaign, Shadows Over Bogenhafen. There are certain people, events and information which are further developed in that instalment and others in the campaign, a nice touch which gives that appearance of a deeper ' reality ' to the setting, which really helps the players and GM to get immersed in the game.

Shadows Over Bøgenhafen is a personal favorite of mine. TEW as a whole is built on coincidences but I personally felt it added a charming sense of spontaneity. Additionally, when you consider who shows up in the Apocalypse ending of Bogenhafen, it makes sense that so many "coincidences" have occurred.

The second book, SHADOWS OVER BOGENHAFEN (SOB) was primarily adventure, with detail about the town of Bogenhafen and the Guilds of the Empire thrown around the edges. Hogshead has reprinted both in TEW VOLUME 1. I've separated them for the purposes of this review, but unless you're an eBay junkie you'll probably find them together.
