Recipes from the 1430 book Liber Cure Cocorum. The Liber Cure Cocorum is an English cookbook from Lancashire that dates back to the year 1430. The original text was in the Sloane Manuscript Collection and was found as an appendix to the "Boke of Curtasye". The book describes a great variety of dishes like potages, broths, roasted meats, sauces and petecure and was written in a northern English dialect of the 15th century.

Jane has currently researched recipes from the Medieval, Tudor, Victorian and Edwardian periods and brings those recipes alive in her historical kitchen. Within the kitchen there are fires, a clay bread oven (mounted on a cart), butter churn and a grind stone for flour. Guests are encouraged to participate in the recipe of the day by assisting in the making of ingredients.
